In "Above the Fold" New Expressions in Origami" at the Allentown Art Museum, the traditional Japanese art of paper folding has been taken to an extraordinary artistic level. Nine artists from around the world have created intricate, sophisticated sculptures, some tiny, some large, many that explore religious, social and political ideas. Some have even employed mathematical theorems to solve folding problems.

The traveling exhibit, which has filled the Scheller and Fowler galleries since March, is moving on. Closing day is Sunday, May 28.
